Armed Deputies Guard Gangsters' Path Today

ATTEMPTS AT RESCUE FEAR OF OFFICERS

Route Between Jail and Court House is Guarded

Benton, Ill., July 13.—(AP)—Armed with high-powered rifles, seven deputy sheriffs guarded the line of march taken in bringing Charles Birger, Art Newman and Ray Hyland, gangsters into court here where they are on trial for the murder of Mayor Joe Adams, of West City.

Sheriff James Pritchard said the placing of the hidden guards was a move to safeguard his prisoners from any attempts on the fellow gangsters to rescue them. The riflemen were placed at points of vantage along the route from the Franklin county jail to the court room, a distance of two blocks.

Handcuffed to Deputies

The prisoners were handcuffed to deputy sheriffs who carried no weapons, so as to prevent the prisoners from making any attempt to obtain weapons from their escorts.

Sheriff Pritchard explained that he had received no word of any impending attempts to rescue Birger and his steps were taken merely as a precaution. He said the Shelton brothers, Carl, Earl and Bernie, rival gangsters, had been warned to stay out of Franklin county, especially during the trial, and they had agreed to stay away.

"But Birger has a number of friends," Sheriff Pritchard said, "who are desperate enough to attempt anything. Their weapons in the machine gun and we are taking no chances on having an automobile or two of gangsters coming in with machine guns either to rescue or attack our prisoners."

May Get Jury Today

Bright prospects for completing a jury for the trial were seen when court opened today.

Charles Karch, a defense attorney, said he believed the jury would be completed today. Others thought another day might be required.

Four jurors have been chosen and three others tentatively selected. An additional venire of twenty was summoned for today.

Families are Present

The gangsters' wives, children and other relatives were in the court room today.

Bernice Birger, wife of the gang chieftain, came in with Birger's two children, Charline, 5, and Minnie, 9. Birger's sister, Mrs. Ray Shinsky, also was present, as was Mrs. Ethel Geiselman, sister of Hyland.

Mrs. Art Newman has been in constant attendance since the trial opened last Wednesday.

LOWDEN TALKS TO WIS. LAW MAKERS ON FARM RELIEF

Former Governor Points Out Fallacies of Arguments of Antis

10,000 Montanans in Plea to Lowden That He Seek Presidency

Oregon, Ill.—Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, today received a petition bearing the names of 10,000 Montana voters asking him to become a candidate for the republican nomination for president. The petition was presented by W. E. Stockton, Bozeman, Mont., president of the Montana farm bureau, who stated that "Mr. Lowden said nothing could be said at this time."

Madison, Wis., July 13.—(AP)—The same forces which opposed the "radical" interstate commerce law when it was first proposed, are those which now are fighting farm relief legislation, said Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, in an address today to the Wisconsin legislature.

Those same forces, Mr. Lowden said, now give the interstate commerce regulations full credit for the great prosperity of the railroads, and the same beneficent result has come from grouping the country's credit under the Federal Reserve act.

Now it is the farmer's turn, he declared, to be permitted to enjoy the benefits of stabilizing his market with the approval of the government. If all farm producers were given the power by congress to fix their selling price at or near the cost of production, the greatest of all obstacles to successful cooperative marketing enterprises would be removed.

But, he suggested, the "equalization fee" to cover the costs of handling surpluses needs to be applied not only to the majority but universally, to make the farm relief program workable and this is the proposal which its opponents term "radical."

"The Federal Reserve act," said Mr. Lowden, "was radical in exactly the same sense that this proposed farm relief legislation is radical. It meant the revolution of the entire structure and processes of currency and credit."

CALL SESSION ARMS PARLEY FOR MORROW

Negotiations Progress in Friendly Manner Delegates Say

Geneva, Switzerland, July 13.—(AP)—Delegates to the naval conference today decided to convene a plenary session tomorrow at 3 p. m.

The session was arranged, it was learned, so that assurance can be given that the negotiations are continuing in the friendliest manner.

The atmosphere was most friendly, although a meeting held today did not result in any agreement on the cruiser problem, the Japanese insisting they must have real limitation. This meeting was held to take up the problems of the conference. The chief interest centered on the question of cruisers and Japan's announced intention to sign no treaty which involves expansion of its navy.

Jap Proposal Fell Flat

In the meantime, the Japanese suggestion that the United States and Great Britain negotiate a treaty between themselves has awakened no enthusiasm in American circles.

A treaty making 400,000 tons as the limit of cruiser strength of Great Britain and the United States is not to the liking of American delegates because it means expansion of the navy. Moreover, it is regarded as difficult for Great Britain and the United States to tie their hands by a treaty with Japan free to do what she wishes and to concentrate naval building in any one category as, for instance, submarines.

U. S. Delegation Solid

Still another objection is that the United States would be unable to determine in advance just how far it can go in acquiring parity with Great Britain.

Hugh Gibson, America's chief representative, denied the press today that a division exists in the American delegation. He denied also that the Americans ever demanded the right to build twenty-five 10,000 ton cruisers.

FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

The national woman's party has been holding a convention in Colorado Springs. The particular task this party has cut out for itself is removal from statutes of all sections, words and phrases that indicate that there is any difference between man and woman in the eyes of the law. These women are a bit hardboiled about it. They would rid the statutes of provisions that discriminate in their favor along with those that discriminate against them.

The worst of their crusade is that they want another constitutional amendment just at a time when there is some reaction against such procedure, as evidenced in the wallop given the child labor proposal.

In the various states the laws pertaining to women and their rights and privileges vary according to the ages of the commonwealths and their constitutions and early enactments. In the oldest states, the law was likely to show that the man was the head of the family, and this thread might be seen throughout the fabric, particularly with reference to property. Newer states gave the wife more pronounced rights in relation to the accumulations of the family or upon death of the husband.

Then we came upon the age of much lawmaking, regulating everybody and everything. We limited the working day of woman and sought to throw about them various safeguards. Further limitation now is sought in this and other states, so that women can not work more than eight hours in twenty-four.

Throughout the advocacy of these laws shortening the hours of women's labor, it has been evident that it is labor legislation and not women's legislation. That does not alter the merits of the proposals, whatever they are, it only catalogues them where they belong. The child labor amendment to the constitution finally was catalogued in the same manner as labor legislation and not as child labor restriction.

With reference to the 8-hour law for women, the woman's party points to the fact that eight hours for men is merely a basis as to wages and not a restriction of the number of hours they can work, while the 8-hour day for women would prohibit work more than that number of hours, regardless of the disposition of the woman to work longer and get more money.

Mrs. Frances Roberts of New York referred to a law prohibiting waitresses working after 10 at night.

"If anyone can explain why it is more detrimental to the health and morals of a woman to serve food than it is to sit at a table and eat it after 10 at night, I wish they would," she said. "You can't legislate women out of restaurants or make them go to bed at a certain hour each night."

"The men don't care about protecting the waitress. They want to prevent her working after 10 because it is after that the work is the lightest and the tips are the heaviest. The men make more in four hours than the girls do in eight. There are plenty of jobs not affected by so-called 'protective' legislation, but they are jobs the men don't want, such as nursing, scrubbing and telephone switchboard operating."

There you have it from the national woman's party. They do not want to be protected.

COUNTING NOSES IN CHINA.

Examine the average man's idea on the American Revolution, and you will find that he believes all people in the Colonies, moved by righteous indignation, united to drive the British from American soil. As a matter of fact, nothing could be further from the actual state of affairs. Historians have long since proved that the participating patriots made up a minority of the population. Another active minority had marked British sympathies. The remainder, which was probably the majority, wanted only law and order. The Revolution, at all events, was won by a minority.

Examine the average man's ideas on the Chinese Revolution, and you will find that he believes there are only two sides—the "southern" revolutionists and the "northern" imperialists. As a matter of fact, nothing could be further from the actual state of affairs. The two active belligerents in the revolution are minorities. The vast majority of middle-class Chinese, who are paying the piper and doing all the suffering, want only law and order, peace, and the privilege of doing business. The revolution will be won—or lost—by a minority.

THE ANYMITES
STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

The little Princess cried. "Don't run! The popcorn storm is all in fun. The kernels cannot hurt you. They are much too soft and small. Don't hide beneath that spreading tree. It's safe out here as it can be. When there's enough upon the ground, I'll stop the popcorn fall."

The Princess watched her for a spell and then she heard wee Clowzy yell. "I think that we'll stay where we are until the shower is through. Excuse is if we make a fuss, but you are bigger, far, than us. We fear the corn might hurt us though it doesn't bother you."

The Princess answered. "Oh, all right. Just wait. I'll try with all my might to make the storm of popcorn stop. You're funny little men." And then she shouted, rather rough. "Oh, popcorn—stop! We've had enough!" And very soon the storm was over, and it was clear again.

Out rushed the Princess from the tree, exclaiming, in one voice, "Oh, gee! Just watch us eat our fullest fill of popcorn from the ground."

"There's plenty here," the Princess said, "for all of you. Go right ahead." The Princess were surprised to see how much good corn was found.

When they had eaten quite a lot, more than they should, as like as not, the Princess shouted, "Follow me, and do not be afraid. I'll take you now to Syrup Falls. I wish you all had overalls, for you could help the man who knows how popcorn crisp is made."

It wasn't long till they were there. The scene they saw was truly rare. A wall of rocks towered over head. It was a wondrous place. And, in between the rocks of stone, they heard a rushing liquid groan. A brownish sea of syrup foamed and dropped down into space.

(The Princess help shovel popcorn into boxes in the next story.)

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is chapter 83 of the series of articles written by an ex-soldier who is revisiting France as a correspondent for The Telegraph.

CHAPTER LXXXIII

Iranie Dumanchin has a story of the super-valiant huntsman of the A. E. F. that he loves to tell. The extraordinary nimrod was a colonel of infantry stationed at Courcelles, near Langres, France, and the sad part is that Iranie has forgotten his name.

Anyway, this colonel, early in 1919, discovered that the semi-mountainous region was inhabited by wild boars, and decided to indulge in a bit of the sport that has been famous through the ages. So he secured a rifle, asked Iranie to be his guide and put 150 of his private soldiers on the detail. The attack was scheduled for 8 a. m. and the plan of operation as mapped out by the colonel was carried out with military precision.

The Feast

The colonel picked out an eminence and instructed his 150 helpers to dash through the forest, beating about with clubs and uttering wild yells. Their drive was to focus on his location. The plan worked perfectly. The men came on, bally-hooing like demons, from all points of the compass. The colonel, very cool and calm, stood with his gun in position. As the circle of soldiers narrowed the boars began to scurry past and the colonel knocked off six in a period of less than ten minutes.

It was a tremendously successful shoot. When the official barrage was spent, the men swept on up, picked up the carcasses and the party returned. That night the officers' mess was a feast.

The next day the word spread around with the result that many of the soldiers who had participated in the sanguinary drive shouldered their pieces and went out to get a few wild boar chops for themselves.

The Chase Is Ended
But their ideas were wrong. For almost immediately, typewriters at headquarters began to click and orderlies rushed around to the various billets with copies of an order which they placed in conspicuous places. The order read:

To Company Commanders
"Complaints have been made by the mayor of Courcelles about American soldiers hunting in the vicinity with no regard for French Hunting Regulations. Request that hereafter no soldier be permitted to hunt except by permission from the mayor and then accompanied by French civilians."

Iranie Dumanchin says the colonel's hunting parties never were interfered with after that.

SAINT and SINNER

Her baby was exactly three weeks old when Cherry came home from the hospital. Ten-year-old Joy, at the suggestion of Dr. Atkins, who had been concerned about her health, had been packed off, jubilant, to a girls' camp in the mountains. In place of her bed in Cherry's room stood a beautiful little crib, painted a pale green, with tiny clusters of pink roses.

Cherry surveyed her changed room with shining, golden eyes, then grinned a little ruefully at Faith. "I don't know what in the world I'm going to do with this little red-headed brat of mine. If she cries during the night I'll be perfectly helpless. The baby didn't sleep with me, you know—slept in the infants' ward, along with forty-seven other champion little squealers. But there was no chance of my getting somebody else's baby by mistake. Not with that hair of hers!"

She was holding the baby on her lap, and to Faith, looking on with fond, amused eyes, she seemed like a little girl playing with a doll—a particularly lifelike little doll, chosen because of its copper-and-gold fluff matching her own short, rioting curls.

"I'm going to keep her in my room for a few nights, until you're stronger," Faith decided suddenly.

"Oh, would you?" Cherry was pathetically relieved and grateful. "I—I feel so helpless. Isn't she a love, Faith? Did you ever see a more beautiful baby in all your life? Her precious skin is getting to be as white as milk. I do believe she's going to have a complexion just like "With your eyes and my hair and complexion this little midget is going to grow into a heartbreaker, aren't you, you precious?"

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

BY AHERNS

When Faith called Bob from the living room, where he was browsing through the Sunday paper, to remove the crib from Cherry's room to their own, he gave her one long, level look, then shrugged his shoulders slightly. It was a look that said as plainly as words, "I might have expected this. You're going to be this baby's slave, spare Cherry all the bother and worry of raising her baby, spoil it and her, just as you've always spoiled Cherry."

Faith flushed, but with Cherry looking on, the lids drooping with weariness over her golden eyes, she could not justify herself. And she wanted the baby. It had been a positive agony to give to child back to the nurse at the hospital. The very flesh of her arms ached in loneliness and almost terrifying desire for the feel of the tiny body. Now, as Cherry sat with the infant in her lap, fluffing the red-gold floss that was already long enough to show an enchanting curl, Faith felt an almost fierce jealousy. It was all she could do to keep from snatching the baby from its mother. She was passionately grateful to Cherry for her helplessness, which would give into her own hands the sole care of the infant, during the nights at least. There was only a fleeting fear in regard to Bob. Of course he would not like it just at first—having the baby in their hitherto sacredly private bedroom, the only privacy they had managed to keep after the arrival of the family—but he would get used to it; he would love the baby, too, already loved it with indulgent amusement.

Bob, with rather a grim look on his face, carried the crib from Cherry's room.

TOMORROW: The baby brings complications into Cherry's life.

NEWSPAPER VITAL FORCE IN GROWTH OF PENNEY STORE

Executive of Great Orga- nization Lauds Ads in Papers

New York—"Slowly but surely the great American public is becoming, to quote from the advertising of a prominent New York store, 'more wisely critical of what it buys.'" according to R. L. Whitman, advertising director of the J. C. Penney Company. "And I further believe," Mr. Whitman continues, "that we are approaching very near the time when the confidence-building, service-rendering type of merchant will discontinue such practices which are branded as unethical. A newspaper is primarily a news medium, and if advertising does not present an instructive and constructive news message, it has no place in a newspaper."

"The J. C. Penney Company this year will expend upwards of $2,300,000 for advertising and fully 85 per cent of this sum will go for newspaper space."

"The best advertising work of our organization dates from January 1, 1926. More thought, planning and better execution is being put into the job and the results have been extremely gratifying. While the percentage cost of our advertising to our sales has varied but a small fraction from year to year, our sales in 1926 increased 27 per cent. From January 1 to June 1 of this year we made a sales gain of nearly 31 per cent. This year's gain we regard as rather remarkable considering weather conditions and a tendency on the part of many people to find that times are not as good as they were."

"A point that every publisher would do well to emphasize to the retail merchant is the importance to the merchant's selling program of a definite tie-up with nationally advertised merchandise. Of course he must be posted in advance by the national advertiser on publications and insertion dates so that he can plan ahead for his local advertising and displays."

"We tell the people through our advertisements, that they do not need to respond today, tomorrow or any particular day, to our message, but that they can come at any time. Our merchandise and our prices will be the same next week or next month, as today."

"Neither price, quality, style nor service is the outstanding feature of our storekeeping, but all these factors sold collectively and inventoried as 'good will reserve.' Good will and confidence in our operations are to us what comparative prices are to other stores, the basis by which we wish people to judge our values. We use thousands of columns of space for institutional or good will advertising with very satisfactory results."

"We have repeatedly found that the morning newspaper, with its country circulation requires a different merchandise message than the one for the evening field. To use the same advertisement in both editions would, in our case result in much waste of money. This is not a theory with us. It is our experience. We refuse to quarrel with the publisher in cases of this kind, but we reserve the right to buy space just as we buy merchandise, so that we can handle it at a profit."

"Another point that must always be borne in mind is that our experience has conclusively demonstrated that one newspaper covering, for example, two-thirds of the trading population, enables us eventually to make our advertising effective with the entire population. When we have sold the two-thirds in a definite way the force of that achievement brings the necessary influence to bear upon the families comprising the remaining one-third."

"The J. C. Penney Company entertains no fear for the future of newspaper advertising, believing that its principle is fundamentally sound and that this principle will be more and more safeguarded as time goes on. We can all be sure that the American newspaper is a vital and growing force in the retailing world."

CIVIC ACHIEVEMENTS

BY DON E. MOWRY

Secretary, American Community Advertising Association

By providing opportunities for advanced education through the organization of junior colleges, many cities are helping their young people save considerable sums of money, and are, in addition, attracting young people from other communities.

How the junior college idea grew in New Bern, N. C., offers an example of what any city can do toward the founding of similar institutions.

The laws of North Carolina require that teachers without an M. A. degree attend a special twelve weeks' session every three years with the result that colleges in the state either conduct teacher training schools at the colleges or training courses at other schools.

The citizens of New Bern erected a dormitory and dining room to accommodate 250 students and the school is operated through the extension department of the Wake Forest College.

The establishment of the teachers training school is simply the first step in a larger educational program for this county, the ultimate goal being either the establishment of a junior college or state normal school with control vested in a board of seven trustees appointed from the Chamber of Commerce.

Now the county board of education has approved the plan of operating this school as a junior college for the county, extending the privileges of joining to the other counties immediately adjacent to Craven county, and a special bill was prepared for that purpose. This will be the second junior college in the state. Asheville having recently founded the first.

New Bern is interested in education, being the first city to establish a public school in the colony of North Carolina, and the first to establish a consolidated school district.

Lou's Smile—Ruth's Tears—The Reason

Mr. Lou Gehrig, New York Yankee swatmaniac, smiles complacently at little Marcella Pinkenfield, the perfect baby, while below him the estimable Mr. Ruth bows his head in his arm despondently. Why? Gaze upon the action scene above. It portrays the fall of Mr. Ruth's seasonal home run crown to Mr. Gehrig during a Yankee batting saturnalia against the Washington Senators at New York. Ironically, Lou scored the Babe ahead of him in surpassing his 1927 circuit-clout. The great Walter Johnson was Gehrig's victim.

Fights for Home

The Union Pacific railroad recently deeded to the State of Kansas for a highway a strip of land the road had held under an old law. KUHN DEVELOPING GREAT SWIMMERS IN CUMBERLAND

Former Physical Director or Local Y Attains Success in East

The following from a Cumberland, Md. paper, telling of the success being attained in the development of swimmers by E. L. Kuhn, formerly physical director of the local Y. M. C. A. and now in charge of that department of the Cumberland association, will be of interest to his many friends here:

Official recognition of the swimming time of 13:9 1/5 made by Webb Galtner in the local Y. M. C. A. pool over the 880 course on June 23 has been received by Physical Director Kuhn of the Central Branch.

The old mark was 13:31, flat, and Galtner's margin in breaking the record was an impressive performance. Galtner will again try for another record for the same distance after six months, when he will be allowed to shoot at his own mark.

The record is the only national Y. M. C. A. title held in this city, though with the increasing interest in swimming here, Director Kuhn hopes to develop swimmers who will shatter marks for other distances.

The letter received here follows: Mr. Wilbur R. Galtner, Central Y. M. C. A., Cumberland. Dear Mr. Galtner:

I am pleased to inform you that the record of 13 minutes, 9 1/5 seconds which you made in the 880-yard swim on June 23 at the Central Y. M. C. A., Cumberland, Md., has been passed upon favorably by the Records Committee of the National Physical Education Committee and will be entered upon our records as a national indoor record. Congratulations.

Very Truly,
JOHN BROWN, JR.
Secretary.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Attempts have been made on the life of ELLIE MARBERRY, an American girl owning considerable property near the little town of PORTO VERDE, in west central Brazil. Several mysterious deaths have occurred, but so far she has escaped harm, due to the shrewdness of her cousin and protector, VILAK, a curious mixture of American and Oriental blood and a student of criminology.

Vilak has been trying to persuade Ellie to leave Porto Verde, letting him stay behind with his friend, LINCOLN NUNNALLY, an elderly American chemist, to solve the mystery. She finally agrees, but her departure is prevented by threat of floods. Messengers ride through the countryside, warning the natives. Vilak suggests they go to the house of GAYLORD PRENTISS, a recluse and a formidable man and an enemy of Ellie's, whom she suspects of a knowledge of the conspiracy against her. She agrees to their plan.

Vilak learns the flood warning is a ruse to get Prentiss out of his home and so informs him. The party is headed by an armed force in a stone tower next to Prentiss house. Vilak disperses the enemy by dynamiting a dam and causing a real flood. When the water recedes they discover Prentiss is gone.

The next day, TINKY, Ellie's two-year-old orphaned nephew, is kidnapped for the second time. A native reports Prentiss has been seen with a baby. The trail leads into the jungle and, with native trackers, they pursue. Calamity overtakes them. Their natives are hurt, or desert, and two of their white friends are never victims.

Ellie, Vilak and Nunnally finally emerge from the jungle. Presently they come to the outskirts of a strange city, resembling the old Inca civilization.

Here they are made prisoners. They discover they are in the town of CHITTO, D'ALBENTARA, whom they had known in Porto Verde as an engineer. D'Albentara is the ruler of the city that Vilak and Nunnally should be killed.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY CHAPTER XLI

THROUGH the apertures in the stones which served as windows Vilak and Nunnally could look down on the court through which they had passed a moment before, a court enclosed by a ruined colonnade or gallery.

From it rose the gigantic stone figure with the fire before it which they had noticed from the mountain, a figure which on this closer view seemed to be grotesquely carved in the shape of one of those fantastic creatures so common in the art of earlier civilizations, half human, half bird, with short arms and claws stretching out to the east.

On either side rose two shafts of stone. On one of these was fixed a rusty Spanish arquebus, on the other parts of a Spanish rack.

At the foot of the great figure Vilak could now perceive a smaller one. About the size of a man, it was obviously a crude and recent attempt to copy the impressive statue figure overshadowing it. It had none of the stoic Egyptian-like dignity of the other; its head was uncouth, with great wide-open mouth like the negro fetishes from the Zambesi. It had but a single roughly chiseled arm, which began at the chest and appeared to be clumsily hinged there, so that pressure would move it up or down.

The flat hand had no fingers. Instead, what were apparently three sharp-pointed pieces of wood or thorns were thrust into the flat of the palm. Radiating out from this figure was a sort of flat, table-like stones, the central one, the largest, being directly under the outstretched arm. Beyond this burned the fire.

Vilak drew away from the window. For half an hour he lay silent, thoughtful. The Chinese

"Three more days, amigos. Then at sunrise you will be laid upon the altar of the fire-god to await the moment for the sacrifice."

cast of his eyes accentuated. At last he spoke. "Wish I could reach for one of my cigarettes," he said genially to the old man, who had rolled close to his side. "But since I can't, I'll talk. Might as well be cheerful. Won't help Ellie or any of us by worrying. Look out that window and see if what I said about these people being a carking treatise on primitive religion isn't true. The big figure and the stone shafts are Inca, that imitation of the statue is absolutely African, and the rack and arquebus are European, of course."

"Perfectly natural that they should worship them. The rack and the arquebus were two of the most cruel and oppressive weapons the conquistadores had, and all the natives thought they were magical. The arquebus particularly would seem so to a nation of fire-worshippers. And fire-worship is certainly one Inca thing which these poor half-breed devils have made their own."

"It's to be expected of a people living near an extinct volcano which still has hot springs and smoke to show that it isn't so terribly extinct after all. Besides, sun-worship or fire-worship—they're the same—is the most widespread of any of the savage religions. It's the first. The most conspicuous object in the savage's life in the daytime is the sun, which gives him heat, light, and food; the most conspicuous at night is fire."

The old man winced as a wasp settled on his arm. It flew away without stinging. With relief he rubbed his arm against the wall.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

BOBBIE JONES IS HIMSELF TODAY IN BRITISH MATCHES

Master Sets Fans Wild With Great Play at St. Andrews

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 13—(AP)—Bobby Jones struck a hard blow in defending his British open title by scoring a 68 for the first 18 of the 72 holes to decide the title.

After compiling a record 132 on the first nine, he went seriously at the task of bettering par on the difficult second nine.

He missed only two shots, and at the 12th he was five under four. The most spectacular hole was on the long fifth, 530 yards of threatening trouble. He was on the edge of the immense green in two, but nearly 100 feet from the cup. His putt went down for an eagle three.

Set Golf Fans Wild

The round set St. Andrews golf fans wild. Men, women and children burst into wild cheers as the master finished his task for the day.

At the 18th, Bobby was on with his second, and barely missed the put for a birdie to get 67 and break the course record.

Lene Nettlefold came up close to Bobby for the moment when he got 37-34-71, two under par. Percy Allis, English professional, turned in a 73 for the first round, while Raymond De Montmorency, veteran amateur, had a 74 as did Ernest Whitcombe.

"Long Jim" Barnes finished with 58-58-76, while Fred Robson also made 76.

Larry Nabholz, of Sharon, Pa., turned in a 77.

Cyril Tolley, the big amateur, required 77.

BAN TO RETIRE WITH NO SPIRIT OF ILL FEELING

Resigned Head of American League Issues Warning

Chicago, July 13—(AP)—Whatever the American league owes Ban Johnson after his 20 years' service, no money could pay it, the retiring president believes.

Perhaps Johnson had in mind those early years of struggle to establish the league. More likely, it was the knowledge that he had accomplished what he set out to do, "make baseball the greatest professional sport in America."

Though he feels baseball now is established, he sounded a warning: "Both leagues face a danger now. They may grow too cocksure and forget there are interests constantly at work to make baseball a hippodrome rather than a sport."

"I've done my best for baseball and I'm getting old. Maybe it's a good thing that I'll have to play for awhile. I hated to let go the reins."

"I have no animus, no hard feelings toward the club owners who thought they needed a new leader. I've done my best to help them."

Decline of the Spanish tongue in the Philippine Islands is noticed and English is gaining.

BABE EVENS UP HOME RUN RACE WITH TEAM MATE

Cubs and Pirates Both Won Tuesday Games: Sox On Top Too

(By the Associated Press.)

Home runs were made by Babe Ruth, Rogers Hornsby and George Sisler yesterday.

Ruth's wallop came in the ninth and while it was just another run in the 7-0 whitewash administered (Cleveland by the Yankees, it gave the Babe an edge on Gehrig. Ruth now has 30 with Gehrig one behind. Hornsby's clout in the sixth with one on gave the Giants a 3-2 victory over Cincinnati.

Sisler's homer with two on in the ninth at St. Louis gave the Browns a 6-5 win from Boston.

The hustling Cubs continued to hold first place in the Blake's pitching being too much for Boston. The Cubs poked out 13 hits while Blake was holding the Braves to three for a 6-2 victory.

Pittsburgh kept at the Cubs' heels by beating Vance and Brooklyn, 2-1. The St. Louis Cardinals' 9-6 victory over Philadelphia rounded out the clean sweep by first division teams over second division opponents. Cy Williams got his sixteenth homer.

The White Sox rallied in the sixth to trim the Athletics, 8-5. Defeat prevented the Mack men from climbing back into the first division for Detroit was losing to Washington, 9-6.

New York—Once the most feared boxer in the heavyweight division, Harry Wills, brown panther of New Orleans, will try to turn back the years tonight in his 15-round fight with Paulino Uzcudun, Pyrenees giant.

The crafty negro is pitted against one of the strongest men in the boxing game. Wills will have the advantage of 15 pounds in weight, two inches in reach and two inches in height.

Chicago—The college baseball star who broke into the major leagues as Kid Sullivan 21 years ago, was the most illustrious feature of the "Eddie Collins Day" celebration, planned for White Sox Park.

To show their feeling, the fans had ready for Collins an automobile among other tokens of friendship. Collins played eleven years for the White Sox, going to the Athletics last season.

Chicago—Except for four pounds, Sergeant Sammy Baker of New York would be the junior welterweight champion today. He shot so many lefts and rights into Mussy Callahan, the champion, in their scheduled 10-round fight last night that the Los Angeles scrapper went down and out in the ninth. Baker, however, was four pounds over the junior welterweight limit, so Callahan kept his title.

New York—Home from a tour of Europe, William T. Tilden is thoroughly convinced that France's tennis stars are going to be harder than ever to beat in the Davis cup challenge round.

St. Andrews, Scotland—Bookmak-ers who appeared on the course yesterday during the qualifying round of the British open golf championships, were driven away by police who had orders to keep them out during the play.

FORGETFUL

WAITER: Mr. Gray has left his umbrella again. I believe he would forget his head if it were loose.

JUDKINS: I dare say you are right. I overheard him say yesterday he was going to Switzerland for his lungs.—Belfast Evening Telegraph.
